Key Highlights

• Completed Phase II trials for lead oncology candidate CSBP-840 with favorable safety profiles.
• Secured a strategic licensing agreement in the APAC region generating $35M in upfront milestone payments.
• Expanded manufacturing capacity at the main biologics facility, reducing unit production costs by 4%.
• Invested $95M in research and development, representing approximately 23% of total quarterly revenue.

Management Commentary

Our third-quarter performance reflects steady commercial adoption of our specialty immunology portfolio alongside disciplined capital allocation. While R&D; investments temporarily weigh on net margins, we believe these expenditures are essential for driving our long-term clinical pipeline forward. We remain confident in our strategic direction as we approach several key regulatory milestones.

Risks And Challenges

• Potential delays in upcoming Phase III trial patient recruitment due to heightened competition in the rare disease space.
• Ongoing pricing pressures and reimbursement hurdles across key European markets.
• Supply chain volatility for specialized biochemical reagents impacting production timelines.

Outlook Next Quarter

We anticipate continued modest top-line growth driven by stable demand for our marketed therapies and anticipated milestone receipts. R&D; expenses are projected to remain elevated as we initiate two new clinical trials ahead of schedule. Overall, we are well-positioned to meet our full-year financial targets.
