Key Highlights

• Completed patient enrollment for the Phase III clinical trials of our lead oncology candidate, HRBV-302.
• Experienced steady 9% year-over-year growth in legacy cardiovascular portfolio sales.
• Successfully resolved prior supply chain bottlenecks, improving distribution efficiency across North American markets.
• Increased research and development expenditure to 22% of total revenue to support pipeline expansion.

Management Commentary

Our Q3 performance reflects solid, steady execution across our core commercial portfolio while we continue to heavily invest in our late-stage clinical pipeline. Although margin compression was noted due to heightened R&D; spending, we believe these strategic investments are vital for long-term growth and market competitiveness.

Risks And Challenges

• Potential pricing pressures in key European markets due to recent regulatory policy shifts.
• Heightened competition in the immunology sector impacting market share acquisition for newer therapies.
• Ongoing patent cliff challenges regarding two mature small-molecule drugs.

Outlook Next Quarter

Looking ahead to Q4 2026, we anticipate continued stable revenue growth driven by seasonal demand in our respiratory portfolio. We also expect to release initial topline safety data from our Phase II autoimmune trials before the end of the fiscal year.
