Key Highlights

• Advanced Phase III clinical trials for lead oncology candidate NVG-204 with positive interim safety data.
• Secured strategic commercial partnership in the European market for flagship immunology drug Dermaleve.
• Invested $115M in research and development, representing 23.8% of total quarterly revenue.
• Expanded manufacturing capacity at the Raleigh biologics facility to support upcoming product launches.

Management Commentary

Our third-quarter performance reflects steady growth driven by strong demand for our legacy portfolio while we continue to heavily invest in our late-stage pipeline. We are particularly encouraged by the clinical momentum of NVG-204, which remains on track for regulatory submission in late 2027. Despite macro headwinds, our disciplined capital allocation strategy ensures we are well-positioned for sustainable long-term value creation.

Risks And Challenges

- Potential delays in clinical trial patient enrollment across North American sites.
- Ongoing pricing pressures and reimbursement hurdles within key international markets.
- Supply chain volatility affecting specialized raw material procurement for biologics manufacturing.

Outlook Next Quarter

We anticipate moderate top-line revenue growth in Q4, supported by seasonal uptake in our respiratory product line. R&D; expenses will remain elevated as we prepare for upcoming data readouts and regulatory filings. Overall, we are reiterating our full-year financial guidance and remain confident in our strategic trajectory.
